

Jump Right In

Jump right in. Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again. The southern winds sing again, an island lullaby. Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again. Baby powder beach under my feet has got me rolling
And the breeze through crackling leaves like a daytime campfire burning
And the ship is off to sea and the wake it is a churning
As the southern wind sings again an island lullaby
You can jump right in, let the music pull you in
You can jump right in, oh and lose yourself again
As the southern wind sings again an island lullaby Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again.
Sing it, sing it again. There's a place the locals go and no one knows where to find it
And the river starts to flow inside the clouds of Misty Mountain
The water from this stone below becomes a blue-green fountain
As the southern wind sings again an island lullaby You can jump right in, let the music pull you in
You can jump right in, oh and lose yourself again
As the southern wind sings again an island lullaby Jump right in.
You can find me where the music meets the ocean
If you get the notion, stop on by and play a while
A simple tune to get your love light glowing Keep your heart wide open, disappear just like the tide
Let it roll on by And jump right in, let the music pull you in
You can jump right in, oh and lose yourself again
And jump right in, let the music pull you in
You can jump right in, oh and lose yourself again
As the southern wind sings again an island lullaby
As the southern wind sings again an island
lullaby Island lullaby
