

Disconnected

Rancid

Where's my girl, where has she gone
She once was beautiful and innocent
I can't believe in what she says
I look at her and she looked the other way
Disconnected from feeling all right
Disconnected and it ain't black and white
Disconnected, there's a sword through the dove
Disconnected from the country I love
I remember you when you were young and strong
In your summer dress and legs so long
My memories are only for me
I prefer them to reality
Disconnected from feeling all right
Disconnected and it ain't black and white
Disconnected, there's a sword through the dove
Disconnected from the country I love
You think it's over, but you better think again
Neither grace nor sweetness, just malicious intent
It's you and me baby, so we better watch our back
'Cause if we are standing together, we ain't never gonna crack
And we took the Greyhound into the night
With the city on the left and the country on the right
And I knew when I saw you, I read it in your eyes
I heard your voice break when we're trying not to die
Disconnected from feeling all right
Disconnected and it ain't black and white
Disconnected, there's a sword through the dove
Disconnected from the country I love
Disconnected, disconnected, disconnected
Disconnected from the country I love
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <http://greatlyrics.net/>