

Let You Go

Grace Potter

You're mind moved on,
but your body didn't know it was time to let go.
It took awhile to realize that you would never want to be around without your feet on the ground.

Then you crossed that razor sharp line,
there's no soft edges I can find.
There's no turnin' back this time, you're just gone.
Now I gotta let you go so it won't hurt no more.
If I could let you go then I wouldn't feel sick no more.
Sometimes I wonder if we hadn't gotten so close this wouldn't hurt as much I suppose.
I could survive a hundred lonely years
if I could get back just a moment you were standing here.

But you crossed that razor sharp line,
there's no soft edges I can find.
There's no turnin' back tonight, you're just gone.
Now I gotta let you go so it won't hurt no more.
If I could let you go I wouldn't feel sick no more.
And I'm tryin' to find that time when I can smile about all these lonely memories.
Maybe eventually... if I could just let you go.

Let you go.
It doesn't hurt no more.
I could let you go, no I don't feel sick no more.
And now I find with the passing time I'll be alright with all these memories that you gave to me.
I can let you go, I could let you go.
I can let you go, I can let you, I can let you go.
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <http://greatlyrics.net/>