

Inventing Shadows

Dia Frampton

It's not surprising it could end like this
Your eyes are open even when you kiss
You're so distant
So cold, So resistant You see the world in only grey and black
How could anybody live like that Without screaming
Without dying for dreaming And you stare out the window at the passing cars
And you look at the sky,
think you run like the stars
No you're never quite happy right where you are Keep on
Inventing shadows
Where there are none
No, There are none
Yeah, You keep on
Inventing shadows
Where there are none You don't even see the sun
Can't you see the sun And like a shark you never want to leave
The way you live is like you're half asleep
It's just dreaming
If I go who could blame me And you stare out the window at the passing cars
And you look at the sky, think you run like the stars
No you're never quite happy right where you are Right where you
With all that you are Keep on
Inventing shadows
Where there are none
Where there are none
Yeah, You keep on
Inventing shadows
Where there are none You're so young, so beautiful
So flawless in my eyes
And don't you know the world smiles
Every time you smile
Why can't you just smile Keep on
Inventing shadows
Where there are none
Where there are none
Yeah, You keep on
Inventing shadows
Where there are none You don't even see the sun
Can't you see the sun It's in the lights in the world I see

How I wish I could still believe
Time could save
If I go who could blame me
